QUOTE OF THE WEEK

“Outside of the cross of Jesus Christ, there is no hope in this world. The cross and resurrection at the core of the Gospel is the only hope for humanity. Wherever you go, ask God for wisdom on how to get the Gospel in, even in the toughest situations of life.” —Ravi Zacharias

The fallow (unplanted) field is smug, contented, protected from the shock of the plow, and the agitation of the harrow (being broken up). Such a field, as it lies year after year, becomes a familiar landmark to the crow and the blue jay... safe and undisturbed. It sprawls lazily in the sunshine, the picture of sleepy contentment. But it is paying a terrible price for its tranquility: never does it see the miracle of growth never does it feel the motions of mounting life nor see the wonders of bursting seed nor the beauty of ripening grain. Fruit it can never know because it is afraid of the plow and the harrow... in direct opposite to this, the cultivated field has yielded itself to the adventure of living. The protecting fence has opened to admit the plow and the plow has come as plows always come, practical, cruel, business-like, and in a hurry. Peace has been shattered by the shouting farmer and the rattle of machinery. The field has felt the travail of change; it has been upset; turned over; bruised and broken, but its rewards came card upon its labors. The seed shoots up into the daylight. Its miracle of life, curious, exploring the new world above it. All over the field the hand of God is at work in the age-old and ever renewed service of creation. New things are born to grow, mature, and consummate the grand prophecy latent in the seed when it entered the ground. Nature's wonders follow the plow. —A. W. Tozer
