THE SEASON OF PENTECOST

School is out. Schedules modulate to include more vacations. Summer—marked more popularly by Memorial Day than by June 21—is here. In general, things seem like they slow down, even if it's just a little bit.

To some extent, it feels this way for the church, too. Holy Week, Easter, and the Ascension seem long gone. The feasts of Pentecost and Holy Trinity are, for now, recent memories. The festival season, adorned with red and white and processions and nearly weekly Eucharistic celebration, comes to an abrupt end.

White and red give way to green. A long season of green. The season of Pentecost.

But if Pentecost's color is red and Holy Trinity's color is white, why is the season of Pentecost green? Because the holy church, born on Pentecost by the Holy Spirit (red), now enters into a time of instruction and growth. The chief teaching of the church, marked by the color white, is the doctrine of God as Triune, or three-in-one. Having been baptized and saved by this God, we grow as we listen to the teachings of Jesus from the gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke. We today experience the refrain that described the church in the book of Acts: "And the Word of the Lord increased."

So as schools recess for the summer, the church continues to gather in the spirit of Pentecost. We learn and grow and increase in knowledge and grace and faith. And we follow our Lord on this steady green march toward the end of the church year. And there, when Pentecost gives way to Advent, we will see once more how the life of the church is woven seamlessly into the life of Jesus Christ her Lord.
