Welcome to the Chaos of Ministry

March has been wild. We packed and packed and packed, had our first mission team get cancelled due to weather, hosted the Canadian Regiment band to raise money for the church's food bank, and hosted a live stream of the Canadian Biblical Counseling Conference.

I learned what Sheila's brush is because snow storms continued to show up. I have never lived in a place that weather has such a continual impact on plans.

College ministry has been going well, we had our second mission team arrive to help us with our big campus outreach for the semester. It was a high school team from Spotswood Baptist Church. It was a joy to get to spend time with the team and help host them as they served our church plants here.

Drum Roll...we have officially moved into our NEW OFFICES!!

Amid the big ministry plans there has been the normal life things: I have filed Canadian taxes and am still figuring out my American taxes. I am building new friendships and trying to spend time in discipleship relationships. I was able to attend the Briar (a curling championship for all my American readers).

All the while, life goes on for everyone else. One of Calvary's missionaries has been struggling with blood cancer, well this month he had a heart attack. Even been struggling with blood cancer, well this month he had a heart attack. Even when mission teams come, the Sunday sermon still has to get finished; it is a busy reality that I got to watch play out in front of me. Lastly, we had a potential intern and his family come to visit in the midst of the craziest week of the year (so far).

The Month Ahead

This month we will be learning a new normal in the new offices: new chore list, new procedures for locking up, and new team dynamics as we will have everyone in the same building again!

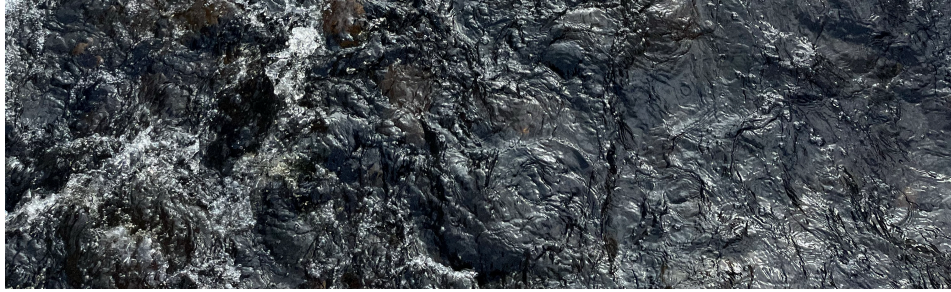

Our campus outreach event went well. Students heard the gospel, and God was glorified on a public university. I am excited to share more about that in my next email.

We have another outreach event on campus for finals week. We will be hosting a study hall. We will be making coffee drinks, giving out pastries, and will simply give students a place to study that isn't their dorm or the library.

We have the last Sing night of the semester, and Matt Lahey the pastor of Route 10 Community Church will be preaching. I am pumped to get to introduce college students to the different church plants in the city.

At the end of the month, I will be doing some devotions for a local radio station. I am excited, but I do need to make sure I prepare well.

Pray with Me

Campus Ministry—

Please pray for the students that heard the gospel at our Concert of Praise. We had a few students who were interested in joining us for Good Friday/Easter, so please pray that those students would come and not only hear the gospel but believe it.

Pray that the Study Hall would go well and that students would feel loved by this simple act.

Pray that our last Sing Night would go well. Please pray that the students who have been hearing about us would come and hear the gospel.

Discipleship Relationships—

I have been able to meet with both R & N. Lord willing we will continue to be able to meet. Pray that I would be able to plan well and make the time for those guys.

Gospel Conversations—

Please pray that the Lord would bring people that I can share the gospel with and that I would be bold enough to call them to follow Jesus.

Myself—

Please pray for these VOWR devotions. I want to be a good witness for Jesus and a good representative for Mile One Mission.

I have been feeling the busyness and the struggle to plan well amid learning to flow in chaos. Please pray that I would continue to adjust well to the new culture and systems and pace of full time ministry life.

I have been very tired and almost melancholy. The Lord has been kind and helped me understand why I have been feeling so exhausted. The past year of my life has been constant change, living in 3 states & 2 countries while adjusting to not only working full time but working in full time ministry has been much more challenging than I thought it would be. I believe that all the change has finally caught up with me this month. Please pray that I would continually find rest in Jesus Christ, that my heart would long to spend time in the word and prayer especially when I find myself emotionally, physically, and spiritually exhausted.

Till Next Time

In the midst of the chaos I have learned a few things this month:

in the midst of the chaos, I have learned a few things this month.

Tim Hortons is great for cheap coffee meet ups.

The colder the day the better the weather.

I am thankful for the cold weather that brings sunshine.

I am very thankful to work on a team that does deeply care for one another.

The Lord is not done here.

Thank you for continuing to pray for me. To those who are giving, thank you for sacrificing financially for me. If you are interested in supporting me financially, please click the button below. Once you do that, just choose M1M from the dropdown menu, and put my name in the note section.

As always, I would love to pray for you, feel free to email me at brodie@mileonemission.ca.

Your brother in Christ,

Brodie Starnes
