

Scripture: Theology, Text & Transmission

Class 13: Textual Criticism & Bible Translations

Review

Last lesson we began looking at how we have confidence in the Text of Scripture. We looked at the preservation of Scripture and the problem of textual variants.

This week

This lesson continues looking at variants and textual criticism – the practice of deciding which readings that are preserved best represent the original text of Scripture. We will move on to cover Bible translations We will explore questions like: Is it a bad thing that there are so many English Bible translations today? Is one translation better than the others? And, are some translations removing doctrines like the deity of Christ?

This lesson will again be completely on a powerpoint, and it will be saved on the church website. To see the materials for this lesson and all the past lessons in this series, go to: <https://www.theheightschurchmn.org/adult-sunday-school>

Our lesson today focuses on:

1. The Problem of Textual Variants
2. The Practice of Textual Criticism
3. Translations of the Bible

A Look Ahead at our next Series

- There is no class for Labor Day weekend. After that, we will be having a missionary update and then Greg Morse and Matt Groschel will start teaching a class on the Attributes of God.

Scripture: Theology, Text & Transmission

Class 13: Textual Criticism & Bible Translations

Review

Last lesson we began looking at how we have confidence in the Text of Scripture. We looked at the preservation of Scripture and the problem of textual variants.

This week

This lesson continues looking at variants and textual criticism – the practice of deciding which readings that are preserved best represent the original text of Scripture. We will move on to cover Bible translations We will explore questions like: Is it a bad thing that there are so many English Bible translations today? Is one translation better than the others? And, are some translations removing doctrines like the deity of Christ?

This lesson will again be completely on a powerpoint, and it will be saved on the church website. To see the materials for this lesson and all the past lessons in this series, go to: <https://www.theheightschurchmn.org/adult-sunday-school>

Our lesson today focuses on:

1. The Problem of Textual Variants
2. The Practice of Textual Criticism
3. Translations of the Bible

A Look Ahead at our next Series

- There is no class for Labor Day weekend. After that, we will be having a missionary update and then Greg Morse and Matt Groschel will start teaching a class on the Attributes of God.