Psalms Reading Plan

For Reflection & Worship

The Hebrew name for the book of Psalms is tehillim, which means “praises”. This reading plan was created for that reason, to help you praise God in your times of personal reflection and worship. It will take you through the whole book twice in one year (along with some additional songs from other parts of Scripture) This schedule is not a replacement for Our Bible Reading Plan, but rather a complement. Some thoughts on using it as such:

- ☉ A daily psalm reading may work best at the beginning of your normal time in God's word.
- ☉ The goal is not to approach these selections from the Psalms as you would other study passages. Instead, let these “praises” become your own in a time of personal worship.
- ☉ Consider what the song reveals about God, about his salvation, about the songwriter's frame of mind and/or circumstances, about what it means to live for God, and about those who do not.
- ☉ Do you know a song that sets that day's psalm to music? Consider singing it, or just read the psalm out loud.
- ☉ After his resurrection, Jesus talked to his disciples about “everything written about me in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms” (Luke 24:44). Consider how your reading might point us to Jesus.
